

Ever Missing Jasmyn

Jasmyn equals honey bears times peanutbutter
She don't remember me
I shed my tears now in ink
I can't forgive the years
I shudder to think I have barely lived without her Protective walls disservice society preventing me from holding her Unforgiving walls do not protect my heart from visiting aches Heartaches revisited are proofs only of love and don't negate that I live, that I breathe that I feel for my heart's sake And filled with pain the heart does not prevent thoughts of her
It is with love for her that I ache
And I ache further
Taken captive by her pictures
I am weak where she is concerned
Paper images capture only the shadows of her sweetness
But love does not escape me
I miss her
Ever missing Jasmyn.

-- Carlos "Sundiata Ibn Islam" Brown